

Gender Differentiation in Media Industries

International Conference, The Peace Institute and Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Ljubljana
Ljubljana, June 14-15, 2018

Call for Papers

In the last thirty years feminist media scholarship has analysed media systems as environments reproducing patriarchal structures that work against gender equality in the media. Results of research at the national and global scales have reported similar results: women are less likely to work in top managerial positions in the media, on the average women journalists are paid less than male, larger numbers of women are engaged in precarious jobs than their male counterparts. Similarly persistent are inequalities in media representation where portraying women is often rife with stereotypes and pursuant of imaginings of women's domesticity. In addition, studies have shown how audiences have been constructed on perceptions that idealize women's roles in the private sphere, reproducing women as consumers. Feminist media studies have long been based on the idea that women's interests in the media are different than those of males. Consequently, research has demonstrated that women, when in leadership positions, can reform predominately masculine conventions or, in journalistic work, produce "different" news. Recently some scholars have been critical towards such "optimism" arguing that it contributes to naturalization of stereotypical gender roles, and have shown that women can work to reproduce the masculine newsroom culture same as males do.

This conference is interested to explore various dimensions of gender differentiation in contemporary media industry as they are reproduced at the level of media production, representation and consumption. The aim is in shifting the focus from researching relative underrepresentation of women in the media to analyse structures and practices of engendered media systems - a shift from what to why. As a corpus of existing literature addressing gender in media at the "European periphery" is thinner if compared to studies elsewhere, we particularly welcome contributions addressing situations in Central-Eastern-South European countries (but not exclusively). We specifically target studies addressing gender in television and online media (but are not limited to these).

In particular, we are interested in contributions addressing:

- Feminization of media work,
- Media work environments and gender roles,
- Media policy from a gender perspective,
- Epistemologies addressing gender and media (political economy of communication, cultural studies, feminist analysis etc.),
- Attempts at reconciliation between “material” and “cultural” analysis,
- Gender representation in media texts,
- Intersectionality approach and masculinity studies in media system analysis,
- Gender differences in imagining audiences,
- Gender and media consumption.

We are interested in all of the above, and wish for the conference to cover various topics. We also hope to attract a diverse range of participants, from a variety of countries and backgrounds. There is no fee for attending and participating at the conference. The conference language is English.

Proposals for papers should include author's/authors' name, institutional affiliation, email address, together with a paper title, abstract of 300 words and a short biographical information. See below how to prepare an abstract for this conference.

Proposals should be sent by January 19 to mojca.freljh@mirovni-institut.si and mojca.pajnik@mirovni-institut.si

Notification of acceptance by March 2

Full papers must be sent by May 11

We plan to look for possibilities to publish papers, presented at the conference.

This conference is organized as part of the research project Gender Differentiation in Media Industry funded by the Slovenian Research Agency. <http://www.mirovni-institut.si/en/projects/gender-differentiation-in-media-industry/>

Intermediary result of the project have recently been published in the journal Teorija in praksa, vol. 54, no. 3-4, English abstracts (pp. 702-704) available at https://www.fdv.uni-lj.si/docs/default-source/tip/tip\_03-04\_2017\_povzetki.pdf?sfvrsn=6

Writing an abstract for this conference

1. Call for papers

Read carefully the Call for papers and make sure that your contribution fits. Respect the indicated deadlines.

2. Abstract proposal's must haves

An abstract proposal consists of a title, author list (list all the corresponding authors), the abstract text of 300 words, 4 keywords, author's short bio of 100 words, author's institutional affiliation and email address. Word limit should be respected.

3. Abstract text

Organize your abstract, considering the following:

- What the problem is and why it is relevant: Introduce the context of your study, including the particular question your study responds to, and demonstrate relevancy of your work.
- How the problem is addressed: Outline your proposal, explain the theoretical concepts and methodology in order to answer the question.
- What are the results: Present clearly the findings of your study.
- What is your proposal's novelty: Explain the significance of your study for the study field.
